FOREWORD

Museums are vibrant both with internal and outreach activities. They are institutions that attract tourists and local community alike. Museums have to organize diverse and innovative programmes to sustain the flow of visitors to the museums. Museums disseminate information and knowledge on the art, culture and natural wealth of the region where they are located. As such visitors expect a lot from the museums. Museum personnel besides their routines, need to involve in doing research by undertaking field visits to different parts of the State and cater to the needs of the public. Government Museum, Chennai has endeavoured in many projects and the publications of the museum are most sought after in the scholarly world.

Monuments in Tamilnadu are large in number. They are being looked after by a host of organizations such as the Archaeological Survey of India, State Department of Archaeology, Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Department, Wakf Board, Christian organizations and trusts run by individuals and groups of people. There are many books on temples of Tamilnadu. Tourism department has published good number of literature on many temples and tourist spots. But there is no single book that brings out information about the monuments and laws pertaining to them.

Dr. V. Jeyaraj, Curator, Chemical Conservation and Research Laboratory of the Government Museum, Chennai with his vast experience both in districts and Chennai has studied different monuments in this State and compiled information meticulously. This information will be useful to those who are keen to visit such monuments. His contribution to the field of conservation and museology is known and he has added to his credit this publication, the Directory of Monuments in Tamilnadu.

We believe that this book will prove as a handy guide to those interested in art, culture, architecture etc., of Tamilnadu as well as to the tourists who visit Tamilnadu.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

As a Curator of the Government Museum, Vellore from 1989 to 1992, I wanted to study various monuments in North Arcot District. Through my research, I was able to bring out two pamphlets on Monuments in North Arcot and Forts in North Arcot. Both of them were well received. Many research scholars used this literature for furthering their M. Phil. studies. In collaboration with the D. K. M. College, Vellore, I wanted to prepare a brochure on the Important Places in North Arcot and the same was prepared but could not be published. This interest created in me was ignited when the museum visitors asked information on the monuments in both Vellore and Thiruvannamalai districts.

Therefore, I sought the financial assistance from the Nehru Trust for the Indian Collections at the Victoria and Albert Museum at New Delhi and I received a Small Study and Research Grant from the Nehru Trust and I finished the project within a year.

The Government of Tamilnadu allots funds for bringing new books and reprinting of old publications of the museum. In the financial year 2004-2005, my book on Directory of Monuments in Tamilnadu was considered for publication by the Director of Museums, Mr. M. A. Siddique, I.A.S. I thank him very much for bringing out this book as one of the museum publications.

I thank the Special Commissioner of Archaeology, Mr. T. S. Sridhar, I.A.S., for sparing information and photographs pertaining to the monuments protected by the State Department of Archaeology. I thank Dr. T. Satyamurthy, Superintending Archaeologist, Archaeological Survey of India, Chennai Circle, and Mr. K. T. Narasimhan, Superintending Archaeologist, Temple Survey Project, Archaeological Survey of India, Chennai for giving information and photographs of the monuments under the control of the Archaeological Survey of India. I should thank the Commissioner, Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Department for permitting me to study the temples and granting permission to photograph them. I also thank the Wakf Board, Chennai for sparing information on the Wakf Board. I thank the Director of Tourism Development Corporation, Government of Tamilnadu for the information and assistance offered for this book. I thank Dr. N. Devasahayam, former Deputy Director of Museums for all his guidance in this work.

I am thankful to the authorities of the Nehru Trust for Indian Collections at the Victoria and Albert Museum for the encouragement.

I shall fail in my duty if I do not thank the former Directors of the Department of Archaeology, Mr. K. Damodharan, Mr. A. Abdul Majeeth who gave valuable information on the monuments protected by the department.

I thank the former Assistant Directors of Museums, Mr. K. Lakshiminarayanan and Dr. J. Raja Mohamad for the information given for this book. I thank the Curators at Chennai and in districts Mr. P. Jawahar, Mr. M. Mohan, Mr. J. R. Asokan, Mr. R. Balasubramanian, Mr. K. Sekar, Mrs. R. Santhi, Mrs. M. N. Pushpa, Mrs. A. Prema Dheebarani, Dr. C. Maheswaran, Mr. C. Rajamohan, Mr. P. Sam Sathiaraj, Mr. N. Soundarapandian, Mr. K. Sravanan, Mr. A. Periasamy, G. Kalathy, N. Sundararajan, J. Mullai Arasu, C. Govindarajan, Mr. K. Karunanidhi, Mr. T. Packirisamy, Mr. K. Saravanakumar, Ms. S. Krishnammal, Ms. J. M. Gandhimathi, Ms. R. D. Thulasi Brinda for providing information and moral support. I thank the Secretary, Information and Publicity Department and the staff in the Memorials Wing especially, Mr. M. Annamalai, Joint Director, Mr. Rajendran, Deputy Director, Mr. Sachithanandam and the staff for sparing information about the memorials in the State. I thank the Director of Tourism and the officials especially, Mr. R. Sadasivam, Mr. Perumalsamy, Mr. Balachandran, Mr. Ganesan and the concerned staff for giving the valuable information on the memorials in the State. When I approached the institutions and individuals who are in-charge of temples, mosques, churches etc. included in this book, they provided me the information and photographs.

I cannot forget my staff, Mr. J. D. Jagannathan, Mr. B. Raja Balachandra Murugan, Mr. J. Kumaran in the Chemical Conservation and Research Laboratory and Ms. Bessie Cecil, research scholar who were always helpful to me in writing this book.

I am thankful to all the technical and ministerial staff of the department of museums who helped me directly and indirectly to write this book. I thank Mr. S. Girija Sankar, Mr. G. Ramesh of the museums department and Mr. M.T. Sridharan of the Archaeology Department for their help in photography.

I thank my family members Mrs. S. R. Hepziba Jeyaraj and Ms. J. Christy Veda, for their valuable assistance through out the period and my son, Mr. J. Abraham Durairaj, especially for designing the wrapper and help in scanning pictures for the book. I thank Mr. Sundaram of M/s. Seawaves and staff for printing the book nicely.

CHAPTER 1

INTRODUCTION

Introduction

The word monument is derived from the Latin word monumentum. Monument is a structure usually a building or statue, built in memory of a person or an event. National monuments are places of historic, scientific, or scenic interest set aside by a government as public property. It has always been customary in monarchies to erect monuments to kings or princes after their death. Such monuments do not qualify for inclusion in this chapter unless the king or prince created the nation or made it understand itself in the person of its creator. India preserves one of the world's great artistic traditions, a heritage of art, architecture and sculpture that go back more than thousand years. Unlike ancient civilisation such as those of China, Egypt, Greece or even Mexico, that of India is very much alive. Buddhist, Jain and Hindu temples are not merely archaeological monuments, they are actually places of worship, where carvings, murals, sculptures are objects of art. The continuity of religious traditions in India means that ancient shrines are still animated by their ritual and mythical context.

World Heritage Monuments

India is a grand repository of ancient cultural and natural treasures of exceptional value. In 1972, the General Conference of UNESCO adopted a resolution with overwhelming enthusiasm, creating thereby a 'Convention Concerning the Protection of this World Cultural and Natural Heritage'. The main objectives of this forum are to:

1. Define World Heritage in both cultural and natural aspects.
2. Enlist sites and monuments from the member countries, which are of exceptional interest and universal value, the protection of which is the concern of all mankind.
3. Promote co-operation among all nations and people to contribute for the protection of these universal treasures intact for future generations.

The list of recorded sites on the World Heritage now stands at 300, which include both cultural and natural wonders, an endowment that is shared by all mankind and the protection of which is the concern of the entire mankind. India is one of the active countries of the forum. There are over 300 World Heritage Monuments, Sites and Natural Sites among them India has twenty six monuments and four natural sites. Among these, Mamallapuram group of monuments and Brihadisvara temple, Thanjavur are examples of such monuments. The natural sites are Keoladeo National Park, Manas Wildlife Sanctuary, Kaziranga National Park and Sunderbans National Park.

Archaeological Survey of India is the premier organisation in the country, responsible for the preservation and protection of about 5000 monuments of national importance all over India.

Indian Laws Regarding Antiquities

India possesses thousands of monuments, which are worth preserving. The British rulers thought about their preservation. Many made a very good study on them and recorded. But up to the 18th century there was no legislation to preserve them. There was a beginning in the legislation regarding the preservation of structural vestiges of the past. The earliest attempt in this area was the passing of the Bengal Regulations XIX of 1810. In 1817 the Madras Regulations came into existence. These empowered the Government to intervene wherever private individuals faced a public building with the risks of misuse.

In 1863, when Lord Canning was the Governor General of India, the Act of 1863 was passed. According to this Act the Government was empowered to prevent injury to any preserved buildings remarkable for their antiquity or for their historical or architectural value.

In 1904, during the reign of Lord Curzon as Governor General of India, the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904 was enacted by the Government of Bengal. It was to provide for the preservation of ancient monuments, for the exercise of control over traffic in antiquities and over excavation in certain places and for the protection and acquisition in certain cases of ancient monuments and of objects of archaeological, historical or artistic interest.

In 1921, in the Devolution Rules of 1921, archaeology was classified as a Central subject. According to this, all the protected monuments under the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904 were brought under the control of the centre leaving the unprotected monuments under the protection of the Government of Provinces.

In 1932, when Earl Wellington was the Viceroy of India, amendments to the specific provisions of the Act 1904 came into effect. These amendments allowed the issue of license to outside, including foreign agencies for the excavation of protected areas and to regulate operations like mining, quarrying, blasting, and excavation at or near protected monuments.

In 1935, the Government of India Act, 1935 made archaeology a federal subject. As per this Act all powers related to the ancient and historical monuments, including archaeological sites and remains previously vested to the Provincial Governments were taken over by the Government of India.

In 1950, when the constitution of India was promulgated, the responsibilities between the centre and states as far as archaeology was concerned were given a good shape.

According to this, under the Union list, ancient and historical monuments and records, and archaeological sites and remains were declared by or under law by Parliament to be of national importance.

Under the State list, libraries and other similar institutions controlled or financed by the States; ancient and historical monuments and records other than those declared by or under law made by Parliament were declared to be of national importance.

Under the concurrent list, archaeological sites and remains other than those declared by or under law made by parliament to be of national importance.

In order to fulfil the provisions of the constitution, the Ancient and Historical Monuments and Archaeological Sites and Remains (Declaration of National Importance) Act, 1951 was enacted in November 28th, 1951. Under this all archaeological sites and remains declared under the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904 were re-declared as monuments and archaeological sites of national importance.

In 1958, with a view to bringing the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, 1904 into lines with the constitutional provisions and also to conform it with the new developments in the changed situation Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Sites and Remains Act, 1958 was enacted on August 28th, 1958.

The ancient monument means any structure, erection or monument, or any tumulus or place of interment, or any cave, rock-sculpture, inscription or monolith, which is of historical, archaeological or artistic interest and which has been in existence for not less than one hundred years, and includes i. The remains of an ancient monument, ii. The site of ancient monument, iii. Such portion of land adjoining the site of an ancient monument as may be required for fencing or covering in or otherwise preserving such monument, and iv. The means of access to, and convenient inspection of an ancient monument.

By the government order number 1836 Education, Public Health Department dated 7th September 1959, the Tamil Nadu State Department of Archaeology was established. Institutions like the Archaeological Survey of India, Southern Circle, Chennai; Department of Archaeology and Ancient History, University of Madras, Department of Epigraphy, Tamil University, Thanjavur and the State Archaeology Department, Tamil Nadu have carried out excavations at various regions in Tamil Nadu. Colleges like Government College of Arts and Science for Women, Mayiladuthurai, The H.H.Rajah's College, Pudukkottai and The Madras Christian College, Chennai-600 059 are also conducting archaeological courses and doing work related to the monuments.

Non-governmental organisation such as INTACH, Dakshinachitra are doing work related to preservation of monuments in Tamil Nadu. Public Works Department, Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Department and private organisations are involved in the conservation of Heritage buildings in Tamil Nadu. Recently the Southern Railway administrative buildings, Vivekananda House, DGP Office etc., have been conserved. The Museum Theatre, compound wall of the Government Museum, Chennai were restored with the help of the Archaeological Survey of India. The Danish Fort at Tranquebar which is under the control of the State Department of Archaeology was restored with the help of the Archaeological Survey of India. The Connemara Public Library, Chennai is being restored by the Archaeological Survey of India as a deposit work. The Senate Hall of the University of Madras is being restored by the INTACH with the help of various architects in this part of the country. The Santhome Church, Chennai was restored by M/s. Gundu Rao Associates. The Victoria Hall which is the National Art Gallery in the museum campus is going to be restored soon. The old museum buildings in the museum Campus are also being restored.

MONUMENTS AND ARCHITECTURE

Classification of Monuments

The State of Tamil Nadu has thousands of monuments of over hundred years. But in this book the monuments, which are of interest to Indian and foreign tourists, are included. Some of the monuments are not even hundred years. Based on the utility point of view, the monuments included in this write up are classified as follows:

1. Temples
2. Mosques
3. Churches
4. Caves and Caverns
5. Forts
6. Palaces
7. Dams and Tanks
8. Tombs
9. Memorials
10. Natural Sites

Temples

Temple is a structure designed as a place of worship. Large, imposing Christian churches are sometimes called temples. In a broad sense, a temple is any shrine or meeting place. Temples have been built since ancient times, when they were often the major buildings of a civilisation. The temple was not a place of worship for large group of people, but a home and a treasure house for the god. In many cultures, only the priests entered the temple.

Temple Architecture

The art and science of designing and building structures is architecture. Its basic function is to provide shelter for man's various activities by enclosing space. A building that only provides shelter, however, is not a good example of architecture. It becomes architecture only when efficiency is combined with beauty.

Prehistoric Architecture

Early man had neither time nor skill to do more than meet the basic need for shelter. Some men found shelter in caves. Others built simple windbreaks or made crude huts of woven reeds plastered with mud. As communities were established, man built large stone structures called megaliths, such as Stonehenge in England. Dolmens, megaliths thought to have served as tombs, consist of several upright stone slabs supporting a horizontal slab.

South Indian architecture has several distinct features such as vimana, standing on a square base. It is a high pyramidal tower obtained by super imposing diminishing storeys; haras-rows of miniature shrines, composed of kutas and salas. The other typical building of the South Indian temple complex is the gopura or temple gateway. Another essential part of the South India temple is the prakara or enclosure wall, sometimes simple but frequently with a series of cells attached to it. At times there are several of these prakaras-the shrine at Srirangam has seven.

The South Indian temple architecture can most conveniently be divided into five periods, which coincide with the ruling dynasties in South India. They are:

1. Pallava (550-900 AD)
2. Chola (900-1150 AD)
3. Pandya (1100-1350 AD)
4. Vijayanagara (1350-1565 AD)
5. Nayak (from 1565 AD onwards)

Pallava Period Temples

The Pallavas excavated rock-cut temples and mandapas and carved out monolithic vimanas. Some of the examples are the cave temples at Mahendravadi, Pillayarpatti, Panamalai, Thiruchirapalli etc. They also erected structural temples at their port town of Mamallapuram and in their capital at Kanchipuram. For these they used soft stones to carve out marvels but used hard stones such as granites as adisthana and for slabs. One of the Pallava kings, Rajasimha built at least five temples, three of them at Mamallapuram, viz. Olakkanesvara, Mukundanayanar and the Shore temple, the Talagirisvara temple at Panamalai, the Kailasanatha temple at Kanchipuram, the Vaikunthaperumal temple at Kanchipuram were constructed by Nandhivarman Pallavamalla (731-796 AD).

Five Rathas, Mamallapuram

The Chola Period Temples

After the Pallavas, the Cholas flourished and during the reign of Raja Raja (985-1014 AD) and his son Rajendra (1012-1044 AD) the temple architecture and art reached their zenith due to their patronage. The Sundaresvara temple at Thirukattalai, built by Aditya I in 873 AD is a typical example of early Chola temple. The Vijayalaya Cholesvaram temple at Narthamalai, the Korangunatha at Srinivasanallur, built during the time of Parantaka I, the Brihadisvara temples at Thanjavur and Gangaikondacholapuram are some of the best examples of Chola temple architecture.

Brihadisvara Temple, Thanjavur

During the late Chola phase two temples were erected, the Airavatesvara temple at Darasuram built by Raja Raja II and the Kampaharesvara temple at Thirubuvanam built by Kulothunga III.

Eastern Side Gopura of the Chidambaram Temple

The Pandya Period Temples

After the decline of the Cholas, the Pandyas gained their power in the south. Pandyas concentrated in the construction of vimanas and gopuras. A typical example from this period is the Sundara Pandya gopura added to the Jambukesvara temple around the middle of the thirteenth century. The gopura on the eastern side of the Chidambaram temple bears an inscription with the name of the Pandya ruler Sundara.

The Vijayanagar Period Temples

During the Vijayanagar rule, many places of worship arose than during the Chola rule in south India. They used very hard stones for the construction of temples. One of the main contributions of the Vijayanagar rulers were the tall massive gopuras, which were normally called as Raya gopuras, some times eleven storeys high as in the Ekambaranatha temple at Kanchipuram. The other contributions were multiple mandapas. The Vijayanagar temple complex contains a greater number of moderately sized buildings including mandapas, pillared halls, shrines and bathing tanks at fixed places around the central shrine dedicated to a god. The steps leading to the mandapa have sculptured ramps decorated with mythical animals of hybrid form.

Gopura of the Ekambareswarar Temple, Kanchipuram

The Nayak Period Temples

After the fall of the central power of the Vijayanagar rulers, the Vijayanagar viceroys, the Nayaks, in the southern regions assumed independent rule of Gingee, Thanjavur, Vellore and Madurai in Tamil Nadu. The Nayaks contributed much more to temple architecture than any body else in Tamil Nadu. The Nayaks further elaborated the mandapas of the hundred or thousand pillared type. During this period the gopura reached full development, as seen in the southern one of the Madurai Meenakshi Sundaresvarar temple. Srivilliputhur has the tallest gopura, with an even greater number of plastic stucco figures. Other valuable contributions of the Nayaks are the kalyana mandapas at Vellore and a similar one in the northern prakara of the Ranganatha temple at Srirangam.

The Indo-Islamic Architecture

With the Mohammedans came an entirely new shape, the dome, so that there was a change from the pyramidal to the ovoid and before long the characteristic architectural feature of many of the cities and towns and even the villages was the white bulbous dome. The style of architecture thus developed has long been known as Saracenic, a designation which now being discarded. Such buildings were not the production of any particular people, as the Saracens, but were an expression of the religion of Islam as this manifested itself in India. They will therefore be usually referred to by more apposite title of Indo-Islamic. Indo-Islamic Architecture is a living proof of the synthesis and fusion of what was best in the building traditions of two contrasting cultures, the Indian and Islamic.

Mosque, Arcot

Mosque is a Muslim house of prayer. Mosques range from simple, unadorned buildings to huge, imposing structures. They may be richly decorated with carving and mosaics work or have plain white washed walls. All mosques how ever have basically the same form.

The exterior of a mosque generally is rectangular in out line. Roofed arcades or colonnades surround an open interior court with a fountain for religious observances. A dome usually covers the fountain. One inside wall of the building, called the gibla contains the mihrab, or prayer niche. The orientation is such that when the worshiper offers his prayers at the Mihrab, he faces Mecca too. It is placed so that the face toward Mecca. Next to the mihrab is the minbar or mimbar (Pulpit). A minaret, or tower, at a corner of the mosque has one or more balconies from which the muezzin (Crier) calls the faithful to prayer. Worshippers remove their shoes before entering a mosque. Usually women are expected to pray at home. When they do enter the mosque, they are kept apart from men. A mosque which maintains a theological school, is called a madrasah. The tomb-mosque, or mausoleum, is often used for private worship.

The Mughals who invaded India were the Arabs, Turks, Afghans etc. Their coming to India made many changes in the architecture. The Islamic style of architecture was not completely new. When they captured a city, they were able to construct a mosque in the city with the help of the artisans of the place. Therefore the style had some influence of the local artisans. The buildings, which were constructed by the Mughals, are palaces, dargahs, mosques etc. Every mosque is similar to that at Mecca.

The Mughal tomb architecture in India developed parallel with that of the mosque. The tomb consists normally of a square building with one chamber standing on a raised platform and a dome over it. In the centre of the square building stands the cenotaph. The tombs of Muslim saints are often surrounded by mosques, pilgrim halls and other tombs, forming a dargah. There are many mosques and dargahs in Tamil Nadu.

Church Architecture

Church in architecture is a building set-aside for Christian worship. The word church in Greek means belonging to the Almighty. It is intended not only to shelter worshippers, but also to arouse a feeling of reverence. Churches range from simple, unornamented buildings to huge monumental structures decorated with priceless art treasures. Often a church is part of a group of buildings that may include meeting rooms, a school, offices and living quarters for the clergies or ministers.

Gothic is the culmination of the ideals and artistic forms of medieval Christian art. Its cradle is in the heart of France. The name Gothic was given to the style by the late Renaissance critics, as a term of contempt, denoting barbaric, because it did not conform to the classical ideals, which were the only ones they accepted.

The interior design of a church depends on the religious denomination that it serves. Most Protestant groups stress simplicity, while Roman Catholic and Anglican churches are more elaborately decorated. However, there is often wide variation among churches of the same denominations.

The Parts of a Church

The Sanctuary, the Choir and the Nave are the three parts of a church. The sanctuary is the part of the church that contains the altar. It is a raised platform separated from the rest of the church by the communion, or altar, rail. During the mass and most other worship services, the clergy officiates in the sanctuary. The altar is a table on which the sacrament of the Lord's supper is offered. The pulpit from which the clergy preaches is usually in the sanctuary in the Roman Catholic Churches. The Choir is the part of the church set aside for a group of singers. It contains stalls for the singers, the organ console and the organ pipe. The Nave is the body of the church, the part occupied by the congregation. Vestry, vestibules in the entrance, baptismal font are also located in the Nave.

Decorations and Symbols

Stained glass windows were used in the early periods. They often portray Biblical scenes or depict incidents in the lives of the saints. The most prominent Christian symbol in a church is the cross or the crucifix. It is displayed not only on the altar, but also in many other parts of the church as well. Even the plan of the building may be in the form of a cross. Other symbols frequently used include the lamb, representing Jesus; and the dove, the symbol of the Holy Ghost. Biblical quotations may decorate the walls, and related paintings adorn the walls and ceilings.

The Hebrew temple of Jerusalem was sacred to both the Jews and the early Christians. After the Romans destroyed the temple at Jerusalem, a similar church was constructed. Its main divisions were the Holy of Holies, in which the Ark of the Covenant was kept, an altar for burnt offerings, and a body (Nave). The church was designed after the temple, with the chancel containing the sanctum on an altar for the officiating priest and his assistant and the nave for the congregation. East or west, these are the basic conventional divisions of the church, and only the details differ.

The Portuguese introduced Gothic and Baroque architecture into India, while, during the British period, colonial forms of practically all European and American styles in church building came into vogue in the country, and purely Indian styles were also adopted. No style, however, completely superseded others, and Indian churches, like the complex cultural pattern of the sub-continent, show a variety in style and taste seldom found in other countries.

The first European church in India was built by the Franciscans in Cochin in 1510 AD. The Portuguese introduced many innovations in the Syrian churches when they took over the Kerala church. The churches and altarpieces were ornamented. Stained glass windows were installed in churches that could afford them. Images of saints were made to adorn niches, ceilings. Walls were painted with religious themes and pulpits were erected. The paintings were generally in the style of the European masters, whom Indian artists studied. Images were usually made of wood and painted, since granite, because of its dark colour and associations with Hindu art, did not find favour with the Portuguese, and marble was costly.

Of church architectural designs introduced into India during the European period, the cross-shaped plan became increasingly popular, especially in places where large congregations had to be accommodated. Apart from the obvious symbolism of the cross, the plan was more suited for better visibility of the altar from all points in the church. There was also sufficient space in the transepts for additional altars, if need arose, for holding services simultaneously by several priests, on important occasions like Christmas. Aisles flank the nave. In the bigger churches, the transept was used by men and the nave by women. In the cross-shaped plan, the vestry is generally behind the altar at the apse with a door at either side leading to the chancel. A dome at the centre of the transept rises over the roof, and at the entrance, on each side is a tower, which serves as belfry.

Modern Trends

In the beginning, Christian architects were hostile to Indian styles in art and architecture, particularly in church building. During the British period, especially by the beginning of the 20th Century, there was a marked change in this attitude, in favour of Indian art and architecture. Increasing interest in Indian styles began to be evinced not only by Indians but by foreign missionaries as well. The modern Dornakal Cathedral of the Church of South India, in Andhra Pradesh, and the Christu Kula Ashram Chapel at Tiruppattur in Vellore district are remarkable for the new trend in Church-building.

Many Indian painters have taken up Christian religious themes and we often come across pictures of Christ in the style of the Ajantan Bothisatva, of the Virgin Mary emerging from the lotus, and in other familiar styles of Indian religious art. Some of these artists have done remarkably well in the mural decorations of Indian Churches. All these attempts are, however, in an experimental stage, and a distinct style of painting, which may be called Christian, is yet to be evolved.

Christukula Ashram Church,

The most important and historic Roman Catholic shrine in India is St. Thomas Mount, Chennai, the traditional site of the Apostle Thomas. When the Portuguese took over the site in the sixteenth century, they found no churches here but only ruins. Among the ruins, however, they discovered the tomb of the Apostle. The relics were exhumed, and some of them are now housed in the present San Thome Cathedral, Mylapore, Chennai. This church was the replacement of the old church built in 1523 AD. It was constructed in 1896 AD. The tower is 50 metres high. The back wall of the sanctuary has a large 3-paneled window of stained glass. The three panels contain representations of St. Thomas and other Apostles, the former placing his finger into the wound in Christ's belly side. This Church was constructed and restored in 2004.

Church buildings by Protestants in India had humble beginnings. Protestant churches in Tamil Nadu were built either by pious individuals or impecunious missionaries who had to support them and their congregations from meagre funds. St. Mary's Church, Chennai, the first church in India was built in 1690 mainly by the munificence of Elihu Yale

Palaces

Palace is an official residence of a sovereign, archbishop, or bishop or any splendid or large house. In the earlier times, the kings used the common halls in the temples as the trial court or the meeting places while the kings visited the area. In the Nayaks' period large palaces were constructed and many such palaces are in existence in Tamil Nadu. Some of the palaces in Tamil Nadu, which are worth mentioning, are, Thirumalai Nayak Mahal (Madurai), Padmanabhapuram Palace (Kanyakumari), Poosimalaikuppam Palace (Thiruvannamalai), Arni Jagirthar's Palace (Thiruvannamalai), Ramalingavilasam (Ramanathapuram), Sivaganga Palace (Sivaganga), Maratha Palace (Thanjavur) etc.

National Geological Parks

The Geological Survey of India has on its charter the preservation of features of unique geological interest of national or international significance. These if not preserved and protected, are likely to be subjected to human vandalism and lost. In pursuance of this, the Geological Survey of India has set up Geological monuments not only to preserve but high light their scientific importance to the scientific community at large. The setting up of a National Park at Thiruvakkarai, Cuddalore district, Tamil Nadu , by the Geological Survey of India in 1951 to preserve the rare and spectacularly preserved fossil tree trunks into a National Fossil Park was a truly precursor to the current programmes of the institution of geological monuments for pillow lavas in the Kolar gold Field area and the Peninsular Gneiss in the Lal Bagh Gardens, Bangalore, Karnataka, in 1974-75. The Geological Survey of India has displayed them at important parks and gardens to attract the attention of the public. Such displays in the form of Fossil Enclosures set up at the Children's Corner. Guindy Park, Chennai; national History Museum, Kerala; Nehru Zoological Park, Hyderabad, Andhra Pradesh; Cubbon Park, Bangalore; National Museum, New Delhi; The Government Museum, Chennai have been found to be very popular and educative.

A National Geological Monument for charnockite, a unique rock formation found in almost all hard rock area of the world, was erected on the St. Thomas Mount at Chennai Tamil Nadu, in May 1975, by the Geological Survey of India.

Forts and Fortifications

Forts are military strong holds. Fortifications are structures, or works, designed to make a place strong against enemy attack. They include any fortified structure, such as fort, barricade, trench, or building. Fortress is a general term for any heavily fortified place.

Kinds of Forts

Fort is a word of various meanings. Primarily it is a walled enclosure of limited area fortified for defence in all directions. Usually it is isolated, but a detached part of a line of defences, often called a redoubt, may also be called a fort. A bastioned fort is one with works, called bastions, which project outward from the main enclosure. The main walls may form a square, with bastions at the corners. Some bastioned forts are in the design of a star, which provides many sharp angles. Bastioned forts expose attackers to clear lines of fire at all times, even when close to the walls.

History of Fortification

The earliest civilisations grew up in walled cities. Troy, Babylon, Nineveh, Athens and Rome were defended by walls of considerable height and thickness that were almost impregnable by assault. There are many references in the Tamil literature for the existence of forts. The forts in Tamil Nadu were made up of hewn stone blocks, baked bricks, mud bricks etc. The famous among the forts in Tamil Nadu are Vellore Fort, Hill Fort at Trichy, Hill Fort at Namakkal. These forts attract many tourists every day.

Tombs

The Mughal tomb architecture in India developed parallel with that of the mosque. The tomb consists normally a square building with one chamber standing on a raised platform and a dome over it. In the centre of the square building stands the cenotaph. The tombs of Muslim saints are often surrounded by mosques, pilgrim halls and other tombs, forming a dargah i.e. place of pilgrimage. There are many mosques and dargahs in Tamil Nadu.

Tamil Nadu has many tombs in various parts of Tamil Nadu. The tombs like Kandy King, Tombs of the British at Vellore, Ottapidaram, the mausoleums in Vellore, dargahs in various places still stand as monuments attracting many daily.

Tanks

Many rulers in Tamil Nadu constructed tanks, ponds, check dams for the purpose of irrigation, taking bath in the palace area. Many irrigation tanks and temple tanks are still in existence and they are the living testimonies of the rulers of the past dynasties. Even today many of the tanks are still in use reminding the activities of the past rulers. Every temple has a temple tank and the tanks were the percolation tanks for the well in the area. The tank at Chinnaiyanpettai was a sculptured tank to arouse the sexual interest of the daughter of the king Chinnaiyan. Among tanks the Grand Anaicut near Trichy is very famous.

Memorials

In the ancient past hero stones were erected in remembrance of the heroes for the good deeds of the heroes in their life and that the stones were kept erected in important places in the towns, villages, etc. The present day trend is to construct memorials for leaders, which is also a continuation of the past activities. Tamil Nadu has many memorials for leaders, poets, religious leaders etc. The very famous among them are the Vevekananda Memorial, Valluvar Kottam, Kattabomman Memorial, etc.

Valluvar Kottam, Chennai

Mosques and Dargahs

The mosque near the Trichy Railway Station is the earliest mosque in Tamil Nadu. The Sheick Dawood Valiyullah Dargah in Muthuppettai, Pattukkottai taluk; Abil Kabil Dargah near Rameswaram Railway Station are some of the earlier dargahs. Committees of the local mosques and dargahs maintain mosques and dargahs. The Government of Tamil Nadu gives financial assistance towards renovation of mosques and dargahs. Besides the Government provides this financial assistance for the construction of compound walls around the burial grounds.

PROTECTING AGENCIES

Tamil Nadu is blessed with thousands of monuments both big and small bearing historical importance. They are either under the control of government departments, private trusts, societies or individuals. A little information about a selected few movements are given here. In order to get more information about the monuments one may approach the agencies. There fore it is pertinent to provide a list of such agencies. The various agencies, which look after the monuments are:

1. Archaeological Survey of India
2. Geological Survey of India
3. State of Archaeology
4. Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Board
5. Wakf Board
6. Christian Organisations
7. Trusts and Societies
8. Individuals

Archaeological Survey of India

The Archaeological Survey of India, an attached office of the Department of Culture, came into being in 1861. It is engaged in preservation, conservation and environmental development of centrally protected monuments and sites, exploration and excavation of ancient sites, conducting specialised studies on inscriptions and various phases of Indian architecture and also maintenance of archaeological museums.

The Archaeological Survey of India is under the overall charge of a Director General of Archaeology with head quarters at New Delhi. It discharges its responsibilities through seventeen circles at Aurangabad, Bangalore, Baroda, Bhopal, Bhubaneswar, Kolkata, Chandigarh, Chennai, Guwahati, Hyderabad, Delhi, Hyderabad, Jaipur, Lucknow, Patna, Srinagar, Trichur, Trivandrum, two mini Circles, five excavation branches, a prehistory branch, a service branch, a horticulture branch, an epigraphy branch, a chemical branch, an antiquities branch and a museum branch.

The Chennai Circle of the Archaeological Survey of India is responsible for the up keep of the monuments under its control in Tamilnadu. A Superintending Archaeologist is

Christian Organisations

Churches are under the control of Christian organisations such as Roman Catholic Diocese, Churches of South India, Evangelical Churches of India, Baptist Church, Luthran Church, Orthodox Church, many branches of Pentecostal churches like The Pentecostal Mission, Indian Pentecostal Church, Apostelic Christian Church, Assemblies of God etc.

Roman Catholic Churches

The Roman Catholic churches in Tamil Nadu are under the control of the Roman Catholic Diocese. The local priest-in-charge looking after the churches with the help of the committees of the parish. The maintenance of the church is carried out regularly by the committee. The head of the diocese is called Arch Bishop. Some of the important churches are Shrine Velanganni, Velanganni; Santhome Church, Santhome, Lourdhu's Church, Trichy etc.

Church of South India

The Church of South India is a union of churches and each unit is called a diocese. The head is called Bishop. The heads of the Bishops is called the Moderator. The various Dioceses in Tamil Nadu are Chennai Diocese, Madurai Diocese, Vellore Diocese, Trichy Diocese, Tirunelveli Diocese and Kanyakumari Diocese. Each Diocese has sub-divisions called Circles and Units. These units are headed by Priests. Each big church has a priest-in-charge. Some times a priest is entrusted with many churches. These dioceses are involved in educational and medical activities in their jurisdiction besides religious activities. The renowned churches in Tamil Nadu are the St. Peter's Church, Tanjore; Brough's Church, Erode etc. They have towers mostly.

There are different Protestant denominations such as Evangelical Churches of India, Luthran Church, Baptist Church, etc., in Tamil Nadu. The churches belonging to various denominations are available in the State but all of them are not monuments. Different pentecostal churches denominations are also there in Tamilnadu but the architecture of the churches are not monuments but they are functional buildings.

Private Trusts

There are many denominations of Christian churches, which are registered trusts engaged in religious, educational and medical activities in various parts of Tamil Nadu. The Chiristhukula Ashram Church in Thiruppathur, vellore district in Drawdian architecture, is one of the best churches managed by a Private Trust.

Individual Churches

There are many churches which are not maintained by trusts or societies. Individuals construct churches and are maintained by them. These churches are not monuments.

CONSERVATION OF MONUMENTS

Monuments testify man's efforts to the present day society through visible media. This has resulted slowly in the construction of places of worship such as temples, churches, mosques, dargahs, gurudwaras etc., as per the provenance of the particular religion. It is our duty to preserve these monuments to posterity with the available technology of this time. Conservation is increasing the life existency of the monument. In order to conserve the monuments, one should have a thorough knowledge of materials used, deteriorating factors, the remedial measures etc.

Materials Used in Monuments

Among the various natural materials available to the ancient man, he chose stone as the very important material for construction. Starting with stone excavated temples, he constructed stone built temples and finally he used mainly brick masonry temples and buildings. Geologically rocks can be grouped into igneous, sedimentary and metamorphic varieties. Most of the monuments in Tamil Nadu have been constructed with granite stones, which is an igneous rock. The monuments in Kanchipuram especially the Kailasanatha Temple and Vaikunthaperumal Temple are constructed out of sandstone, which is a sedimentary rock.

Deteriorating Agencies

Weathering is a natural phenomenon by which all the stone monuments are deteriorating. They are physical weathering, chemical weathering and biological weathering.

Due to the exposure of the building to the natural agents like sun, wind, rain, saline atmosphere and other factors for many centuries continuously, the surface of stones of the buildings undergo deterioration resulting in the collapse of the buildings if they are not conserved.

Rain dissolves the gases like nitrous and nitric oxides, sulphur dioxide, etc., sulphur trioxide present in the atmosphere and becomes acidic and the chemical liquid thus formed naturally erodes chemically the surface of the stone monuments bringing out chemical weathering of the monument.

Biological agents like moss, lichen etc., grow over the rain exposed stone monuments and due to the acidity produced by these biological agents, the surface of the stone monuments is biologically deteriorating. The plants, which grow out of the seeds dropped by birds in the gaps of the stone joints slowly grow into trees and finally destroy the monuments through their strong and deeply penetrated roots. The bird's droppings, containing very harmful organic materials, which get collected on the monuments over a long period of time damage the surface.

Besides these the location of the monuments, water table in the locality, seepage and leakage, negligence, ignorance, vandalism etc., affect the stone monuments very much.

Remedial Measures

When the monuments are affected by various agencies, it is necessary to adopt the remedial measures to control the defects. They are

1. Removal of biological growth (by the application of chemicals such as ammonia)
2. Consolidation of weathered area in stone (normally done with silanes or other polymers)
3. Removal of soluble salts (by poulticing-paper pulp treatment)
4. Application of fungicides (applying a dilute solution of Zinc silico fluoride)
5. Application of preservatives applying hydroxy silanes, poly vinyl acetate in solvents

As our monuments are of very large mostly and are continuously exposed to the dangers of the atmosphere any single action and a blanket measure as a solution is not possible; but the measures should be periodically regular. Even though the periodical remedies are quite expensive, it is worth doing because it is a labour of love for our worthwhile heritage and any neglect will lead to irreparable national as well as international loss of cultural and architectural heritage.

Repairs and Restoration Methods

Before the repair and restoration methods are described, it is essential to discuss about the criteria for intervention in a historical building. The general criteria can be as follows:

1. Reversibility
2. Improving the overall stability of the structure
3. Stabilising the foundation, if found necessary
4. Reduction on complete suppression of water circulation in the walls
5. Improving the cohesion of the material
6. Improving the cooperation between mortar and brick or stone

7. Giving consideration to the aesthetic effects of above actions

Before we consider modern repair methods, it is better to understand little about the historic strengthening methods. The historic strengthening methods used can be grouped as

1. Counterforts (Structural system constructed to strengthen the building)
2. Brace arches (arches constructed to strengthen buildings)
3. Propping (This is provided to support a structural element that is likely to collapse.
4. Ties (when the thrust due to arches or vaults are not adequately handled by the buttresses, it is better to provide ties with stainless steel).
5. Chains (In case of domes, which are facing cracking due to meridional tensile stresses the domes are strengthened by chains).

Modern Restoration Methods

The restoration methods have taken new dimensions and the modern restoration methods can be classified as follows:

1. Temporary strengthening
2. Grout injection
3. Stitching
4. Pre-stressing
5. Strengthening with steel and reinforced concrete.

Temporary Strengthening

In the case of damaged old buildings, when an emergency intervention is required and there is no time to do an investigation, temporary-strengthening measures can be adopted. Many methods of strengthening had been adopted by various builders such as ring anchor, steel collars, masonry etc.

Grout Injection

Grouting can be done to damaged buildings in order

1. To strengthen loose mortar and masonry bond
2. To close cracks, gaps and voids inside the wall structure

3. To increase the load carrying capacity of original masonry
4. To make areas, which are strong enough, to take bigger forces due to changed use, loads or supports of new constructions.
5. To join reinforcing rods and pre-stressing cables and anchors with masonry as well as to protect steel members against corrosion.

All types of cement customary in the trade are suitable as injection materials. The success of grout injection depends on a sufficiently high water-cement ratio of the injection grout and a constant pressure of the grouting.

Stitching

Stitching as subsequent reinforcement happens where tension occurs which the masonry cannot withstand. Stitching is always connected with grout injection to form the bond between steel and masonry as well as to provide corrosion protection.

Pre-stressing

Old masonry is grouted and pre-stressed if strongly torn walls and pillars must be joined to regain their compressive strength, ability to sustain thrust and in addition to withstand tensile stress. The most frequently used stressing tendons are steel rods with through rolled thread ribs on both sides.

Strengthening with Steel and Reinforced Concrete

Some times it becomes necessary to strengthen the historic buildings with steel and reinforced concrete.

CONCLUSIONS

Even though Tamil Nadu is proud of thousands of monuments, there are lack of information about them to the public. The Tourism Department has brought out many hand outs for the benefit of the tourists in Tamil Nadu. They are not in the form of a book. This effort has made the authorities to make the information available to the tourists in the form of a handy guide about the monuments in Tamil Nadu. Many efforts have been taken by many scholars and administrators in Tamil Nadu to safe guard the monuments for posterity through publications and actual conservation work. Among the various programmes of conservation, preventive conservation is the most important one. There fore, the Department of Museums in Tamil Nadu had organised many training programmes and is conducting such programmes every year for the benefit of students and those who are working in departments related to the study and preservation of monuments. The author of the book has spent most of the time in training people in conservation and restoration of our cultural heritage. Let us know more about the monuments and their preservation measures so that they may be preserved for posterity.

At one instance, the Hindu Religious and Charitable Endowments Department allowed the Executive Officers to clean the temple walls by sand blasting. It is a deleterious method as it removed stone surfaces and also paintings, pointings etc., underneath. Therefore, the Department of Museums intervened and conducted four training programmes of chemical treatment as an alternate method for sand blasting at Chennai, Madurai, Salem and Trichy. Executive Officers, Archaeologists, Curators, Conservation Engineers, Southern Railway Engineers and Police Officials participated. The department of museums help to preserve our monuments too. All efforts should be taken to preserve all these monuments for posterity. Tourists have a great role in safeguarding the monuments while visiting them. Taking samples from the monuments, scribbling on the walls, damaging any part of the architecture should be totally avoided. People's Forum may be organised to safeguard them. Corporates may contribute to culture fund under 80C and help the governments to maintain them in the best way for our posterity.
